

A METHOD OF SWITCHING CHANNELS IN A RECEIVER, ESPECIALLY IN A DIGITAL TELEVISION RECEIVER

ABSTRACT

The method of switching channels in a receiver, especially in a digital television receiver in which groups are assigned to channels, characterized in that the channel is manually chosen, a switching takes place to receive the selected channel, the previously active group is deactivated by means of the control signal, the group assigned to the selected channel is activated, and next with the use of the switching function, the next or previous channel is selected, and after this the next or the previous channel, which belongs to the currently active group, is searched and by means of control signal the receiver is set to receive this channel.